

WM. H. RUSSELL, FUSION LEADER, EXPIRES IN HOME

Was Very Active in City Politics and Head of Boston Baseball Club.

William Hepburn Russell, lawyer, politician, journalist and owner of the Boston National League Baseball Club, died today at his home, No. 145 West Ninety-seventh street. He had been ill several weeks from kidney trouble. He is survived by a widow and six children. His eldest son is Todd W. H. Russell, also a lawyer.

Mr. Russell identified himself with Tammany Hall politics twenty years ago, after moving his law business to this city from Tennessee. He has been in and out of Tammany Hall several times, and was one of the organizers of the Greater New York Democracy. He was prominently identified with several fusion movements.

While still a member of the Tammany Hall General Committee, Mr. Russell was one of the leaders of the revolt against Richard Croker in state politics in 1900. Speaking as a substituted delegate from one of the up-State counties, he supported the nomination of Bird S. Coler for Governor and vehemently attacked Boss Croker's methods as leader of Tammany Hall. He resigned then from the Tammany General Committee and engaged with John J. Sheehan in organizing the Greater New York Democracy.

Boiler Russell got back into Tammany in time for the 1903 election of Mayor McEllen, who appointed him Commissioner of Accounts. Subsequently he helped Mayor Gaynor and also

Gov. Dix, lining up with Hearst in both campaigns. For many years William Hepburn Russell was a minority stockholder of the Boston National League Baseball Club. A year ago, with John P. Harris of Pittsburgh, he purchased a controlling interest in the club. Mr. Russell was born in Hannibal, Mo., in 1857.

PRINCIPAL PUTS OUT FIRE AS DRILL EMPTIES SCHOOL.

Miss Tucker's Prompt Work Prevents Blaze in Wooden Building.

A little bit of fire started in the basement of Public School No. 163, in the frame building which was the main mansion at Pleasant avenue and One Hundred and Twentieth street, today. Prompt work by the principal, Miss Louise E. Tucker, kept it from being a very big and very disastrous fire, for the building is old and the only protection to the lives of the children are the fire escapes which have been attached to every wall.

Miss Tucker thought she smelled smoke a little after 11 o'clock. She followed the odor to the cellar, where she found that kindlings jumped against a pipe of the hot air furnace were smoldering. She ran up to her office, had Mary A. Martin, her clerk, sound the signal for fire drill, and herself went back to the cellar with a fire extinguisher.

The woodpile was in flames when she reached it, but before the firemen had arrived she had the fire extinguished. Meanwhile the five hundred little boys

BLIND INVENTOR'S INK GETS HIM IN COURT.

Purchaser of Quick Drying Formula Charges Discoverer With Larceny.

John Frank Coughlin, a blind inventor, of No. 233 West Twenty-fourth street, was held for the Grand Jury today on a charge of grand larceny by Magistrate McGuade in the Centre Street Police Court. Bail of $1,500 was fixed pending the action of the Grand Jury. Complaint was made against Coughlin by Chester T. Beck of No. 133 Franklin street and William F. Wolfe of No. 117 Christopher street.

Coughlin has a formula for the manufacture of an ink that is said to dry as soon as it touches paper. A short while ago he went to Beck and offered to sell the formula for $200. Some time after this, Beck says, he found that Coughlin had sold the formula on June 12, 1911, to Wolfe for $500. Wolfe testified that he had paid Coughlin half of this amount.

When Beck and Wolfe took the stand today they were each asked by Magistrate McGuade to give the formula for the self-drying ink. It is as follows: Forty pounds water, thirty pounds black soap, two pounds brown shellac dissolved in a quart of wood alcohol; one pound of paraffin wax, one pound hard soap, one pound turpentine, thirty pounds lamp black, thirty pounds dextrine and a quart of formaldehyde or one pound of salicylic acid.

E. T. Gibson, from the Legal Aid Society, represented the blind man and sought to have the charge dismissed, claiming it was a matter for the civil court and not the criminal courts. Magistrate McGuade overruled the contention.
